With reference to the Occupational Health and Safety Act 85 of 1993.

Employees have to be examined according to the risk that they are exposed to as well as man job specifications. Section 8 of the abovementioned Act stipulates the duties of the employer. Medical Surveillance flows out of the Risk Assessment as regulated by Section 8. First Choice requires man job specifications prior to the execution of the medical examinations. This ensures that the employees are examined according to the risks identified. In doing this the employer then complies with legislation.
